Dear Brooke,

It's one thing to have an idea, but it's entirely another to be able to pull it off. In a world of us mere mortals we can dedicate our lives to causes close to our hearts, and realize a lifetime later that we've made very little difference...

I believe one person can make a change and it's why I've dedicated my entire adult life to help kids- to pay it forward.

I come to you to ask specifically to join me to help build a children's center in Newtown. We have the finance, we have the support. What we need is someone like you.

- This December there will be a tree decorating/trimming party at the memorial site to reclaim 1214 to become a day of hope.
- This January I would like to hold a film festival- a super hero film festival in honor of all the kids who dream they are larger than life- kind of like you.

With these two proposed events we will generate a Children's Center Fund, help the town heal and honor those lost. And later, scholarships in each of the children's names.

I've been relentless since 1214, I'm proud to say I had town permission within an hour of arriving into Sandy-Hook, and all these months later we're proud to disclose that under our advisement, a family has stepped forward to be the face of the center. But, we have far to go. I am not a celebrity and there's only so much I can do. I know in my heart this needs to be done to champion evil, and I look to you.

Enclosed you will find Chuck. He's a rescue from the SandyHook Memorial and I would like to ask that when the center is built and we have a ribbon cutting ceremony that you bring him back to Newtown and place him in his new home at the center.

Help me fight evil. Alone I will fail- together we can change the world and reclaim 1214 as Hope.

Sincerely yours,

John Rinaldi
